

DUNROBIN

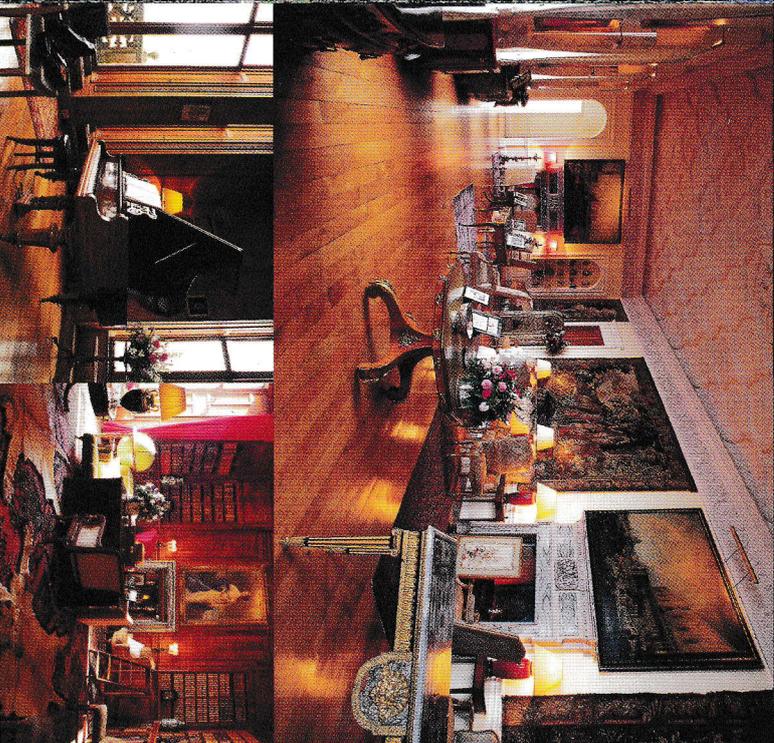

CASTLE & GARDENS

GOLSPIE • SUTHERLAND
SCOTLAND

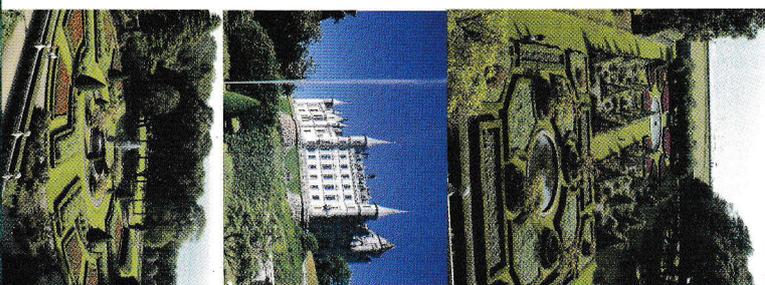

DUNROBIN CASTLE is the most northerly of Scotland's great houses. It is the largest house in the highlands, with 189 rooms and is one of Britain's oldest continuously inhabited houses, dating in part from the early 1300s.

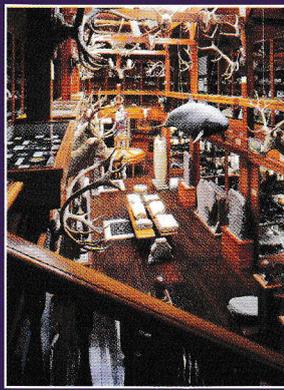

THE GARDENS

The Gardens were laid out in 1850 by the architect Sir Charles Barry, who was responsible for the Victorian extension to the Castle and who designed the Houses of Parliament. The arrangement of the Gardens, inspired by those at Versailles, have changed little in the 150 years since they were planted. Despite its location so far north, the sheltered Gardens are able to support a surprising range of plants.

THE MUSEUM

Built by William, Earl of Sutherland as a Summer House and extended by the 3rd Duke, the Museum houses a collection of hunting trophies and other items brought from all over the world, together with many objects of interest presented to the Museum by friends of the Sutherland family.

The Pictish Stones form a very important collection, giving an opportunity to study the devices carved on stones 1,500 years ago. There is also a section on geology, gold panning at Kildonan and the coal mine at Brora.

FALCONRY

Informative falconry displays 11.30 am and 2 pm Monday to Saturday with additional Sunday displays during June, July and August.

CASTLE RESTAURANT/TEA ROOM

Themed around the castle's own Victorian horse-drawn fire engine.
