

FLOORS CASTLE
SCOTTISH BORDERS

Scotland's Largest
Inhabited Castle

Open Easter Weekend
& 1st May - 31st October

What makes Floors Castle stand out from most historic buildings is that it is also a family home - our family home.

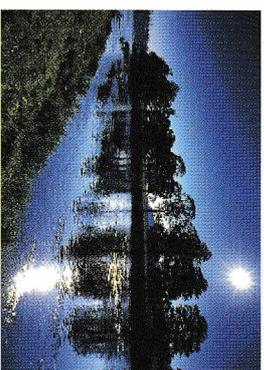

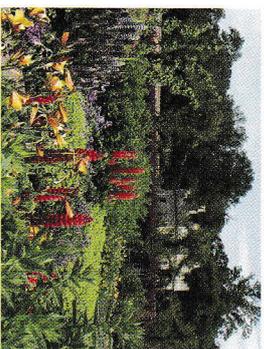

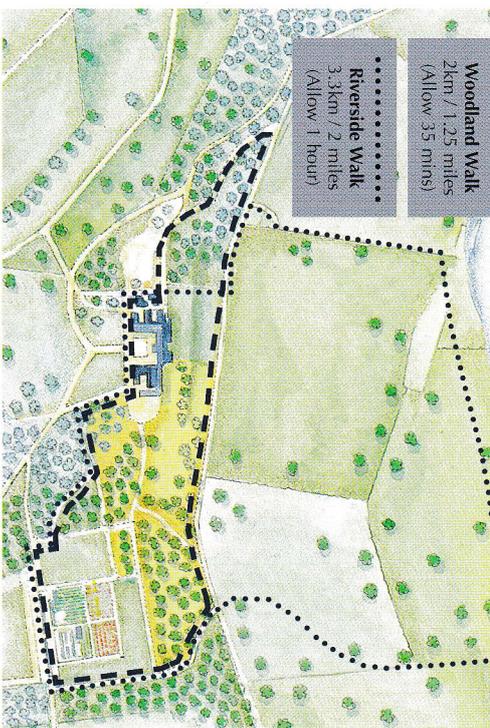

The house was originally built for my predecessor, the 1st Duke of Roxburgh, in 1721.

But, like any family home, it is continually going through changes, with the rearrangement of furniture, redecoration and the odd addition from time to time.

It is these changes that reflect the individual tastes of each generation and, I believe, give the house such life and charm.

I hope you enjoy your visit and share the enormous pleasure we derive from Floors and its surroundings.

10th Duke of Roxburgh

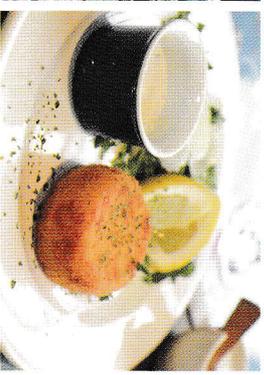

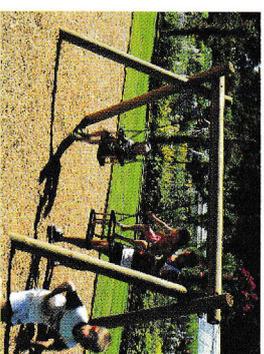

Explore the spectacular state rooms, with an outstanding collection of paintings, tapestries and furniture, enhanced by family photos and plants grown by the Estate gardeners.

The Castle's friendly guides, many of whom live on the Estate and have worked at the Castle for many years, are both knowledgeable and passionate about Floors and its place in Scottish history.

Floors Castle is built on a natural terrace, overlooking the River Tweed.

To see the best of the grounds and gardens follow either the Riverside or Woodland walks. These signposted trails lead you through the most beautiful spots and highlight the flora and fauna along the way.

Be sure not to miss the Star Plantation, Millennium Parterre and Walled Garden. The Walled Garden is one of the few examples of a traditional Victorian kitchen garden in Scotland.

Situated within the Castle you will find the gift shop and the Courtyard Restaurant, where the Duke's Chef, Iain Collingbourne - regarded as the finest private chef in Scotland - prepares light lunches and freshly baked cakes.

In the Walled Gardens you can also enjoy the Terrace Café, which serves mid morning coffee, lunches and afternoon tea with delicious cakes and pastries. You can also stock up on Castle Kitchen Produce and other culinary delights at the Café's deli and shop.

Also within the Walled Gardens, is the adventure playground, which will keep your children happy while you browse around the well-stocked Garden Centre, including many herbaceous plants and shrubs grown in the wonderful spring and summer borders.
